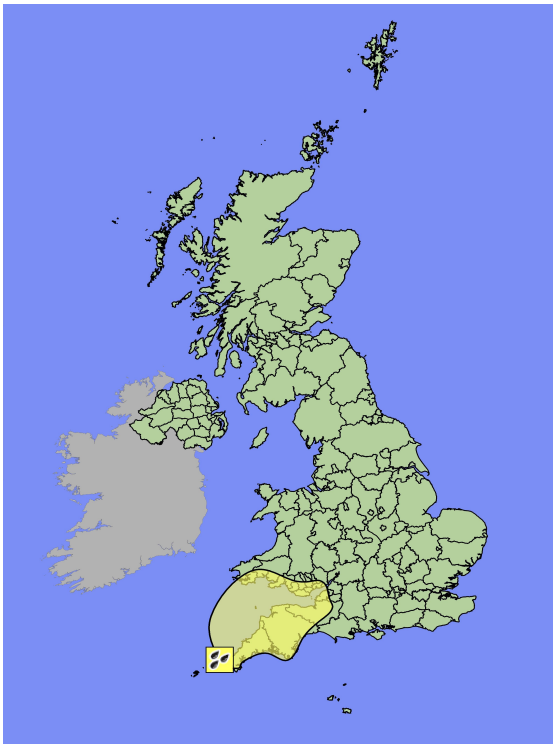
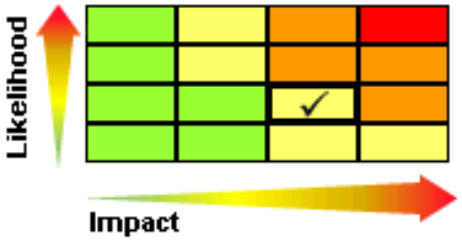
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
With large amounts of lying snow over the hills and moors, comparatively small amounts of rain combined with the snow melt could give rise to problems, perhaps particularly where snow which was cleared earlier acts to impede drainage.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Rain

Valid from 15:00 on Fri, 25th Jan 2013 until 23:59 on Fri, 25th Jan 2013

A combination of rain and snow melt could lead to localised minor surface water and river flooding during the second half of Friday. The public should be aware of potential disruption to travel.
